TINLEY PARK LIONS CLUB LADIES NIGHT STARTS A PROGRAM OF ACTIVITIES

The Tinley Park Lions Club opened their 1932-33 season with a social gathering and banquet in the basement of the Tinley Park M. E. church Tuesday night of this week. This was ladies night and the Lions and their families enjoyed a very delightful enjoyable evening. An excellent program enlivened the gathering. Every one was congenial, smiling and happy.

The response to the invitations to this banquet were so readily accepted that a number of persons had to be turned away as the church basement was crowded to capacity.

Rev. Theodore Loepfert, pastor of the Tinley Park M. E. church offered the invocation and the Lions and the guests sang "America".

A most tasty and delicious home-cooked and home baked repast was served to 72 guests by the Ladies Aid of the Tinley Park M. E. church. This excellent meal demonstrated that Tinley Park has excellent cooks.

Some of the highlights of the evening were addresses by Lion Governor Haggerty of this district. After his interesting talk, the Lions sang "What is the matter with Haggerty, he is all right".

Chaplain Hopkins of the Oak Forest Infirmary gave a very interesting address on the work at Oak Forest and told of the sunshine that is often brought into the lives of the inmates by Lions clubs. He said that at present the population of the Infirmary is over 4200.

Lion President Mills and Lion Cummings of Midlothian were present and Lion Mills lead in a real vociferous Lions roar.

Music was furnished by the Tinley Lions quartet consisting of Lions Clyde Rice, Selby Hirsch, Dr. R. H. Carmichael and Edwin Hirsch.

Lion Arthur Schoeneck caused much merriment with his comedy stunts. A clever take off on the last Lions meeting minutes were read by Lion secretary, Rudolph Detwiler.

Lion President Henry W. Wymann of the Lions Club of Tinley Park, presided and gave a summary of the many worth while objects that the Tinley Lions have achieved for the improvement of Tinley Park and their community. Lion Wymann also pointed out that at present the Tinley Lions are working for a reduction of telephone rates for Tinley Park and for the establishment of a fire zone ordinance. In the official proceedings of the sixteenth annual convention of International Association of Lions Clubs held in Los Angeles, California in July, the following mention appears of the Tinley Park Lions Club activities:

Tinley Park—Was instrumental in getting safety devices placed at dangerous railroad crossing. Conducted a public dedication ceremony of a new $100,000 grade school. Staged a dance and donated half of the net proceeds to school board to help pay for gymnasium equipment. Donated $100 to Tinley Park Unemployment Relief Committee. Sponsored movement for organization of a community band. Entertained American Legion Post. Celebrated Old Monarchs Week. Eight membership reports received; seven on time. Key Members in club, one.

Added to these activities the club is now sponsoring a safety patrol for the local school.

Lion Paul chairman served as the program chairman. The program was given as follows:

Selections by Weissner orchestra
Selection by Lions Quartet
Address by President Henry W. Wymann of Tinley Park Lions Club.
Roll Call and reading of minutes of meeting by secretary Detwiler.

COUNTY COPS MISTAKEN FOR KIDNAPPERS

Last Friday afternoon considerable excitement was caused at Tinley Park when a farmer residing south of Tinley Park reported that two armed men had attempted to kidnap him. Later it was discovered that two deputy sheriffs had spoken to him about being on the trail of some kidnapers.

Rev. Theo. E. Lapp of St. John's Evan. Church Resigns

Rev. Theodore E. Lapp, minister of the St. John Evangelical church at Mokena, announced last Sunday to his congregation that he accepted a call from the People's church at Kalamazoo, Michigan.

Rev. Mr. Lapp in handing his resignation to the church council of St. John's said:

Rev. Theo. E. Lapp.

"Acting upon a request to reconsider my earlier rejection of the invitation of the People's Church of Kalamazoo, Michigan to become their minister, I have after much consideration, decided to reverse my earlier decision and to accept the call. I herewith respectfully submit my resignation as minister of the St. John Evangelical church in Mokena.

"My chief reasons for this decision are: (1) The fact that while serving the People's Church I shall be permitted to complete my graduate studies in the university. (2) The greater degree of freedom permitted in such a free church, both in religious thinking and in religious practices; besides the wider range of interests included in the program of such a church. (3) The larger financial returns making possible an adequate provision for the age of retirement and for old age.

I wish to assure the many loyal friends whose faithful co-operation has made my pastorate here a joy that my decision was made with some reluctance and not without many regrets. My only hope is that such friends will not consider my resignation a desertion, but that they will rejoice with me in my advancement.

"Any knowledge that I may possess of the merits of prospective candidates is at the disposal of the Board and Council if they wish to use it.

"I should like to be released as soon as possible and request that in this instance the requirement of a 3 months notice be waived. I am confident you need anticipate no difficulty in securing a successor almost immediately."

Mokena Garden Club Activities

The Mokena Garden Club enjoyed a pot luck dinner party at the home of Mrs. W. G. Lowe on Tuesday, October 4th. The basement was decorated with flowers and plants and the tables were laden with goodies to eat. Everyone present was happy regardless of the rain which barred the much planned trip to the Kankakee river and dine at the Mall summer cottage.

Nevertheless the club is planning to choose another date in the near future. At 2 o'clock with the presence of 24 members the meeting was opened by Mrs. L. Bruder who installed the president, Mrs. F. A. Tooley in an exceptional courteous manner. Mrs. Tooley then took the chair and at once proved her ability as an outstanding, courteous, capable and co-operative leader. Congratulations to Mrs. Tooley from the club. The official chairmen reports were prepared and responded when called upon. Mrs. A. C. What Burdensome Taxes Will Do

Editor News-Bulletin:
The following clipping shows what burdensome taxation does for a town and shows how close Mokena came to meeting a like fate:

Residence and business property in Morris, Illinois, 138 pieces, were forfeited to the state for nonpayment of taxes and no purchasers at the tax sales. Besides the regular tax, the extra burden of sewer and paving assessments was more than the owners could pay or prospective tax purchasers dared to risk. Only one piece was purchased out of the 138 offered.

Don C. Hall Comments On Hoover Address

When time shall have touched our brows with the silver tint of age, when maturity has brought to us the ripened fruits of fruition, when in our complacency and graciousness resultant from the luxury of a heritage of simple possession, when in the satisfaction attending the closing days of life, the fulfillment of the dreams of philosophers and sages, we find pleasure in a reverie of memories we shall turn the pages of history, back to that memorable day in the golden autumn of 1932, when a gentle man from the Nation's Capitol, his heart bleeding for his countrymen journeyed to the very center of our Nation's activities and there before the assembled thousands gave utterance to the most profound expression that ever came from the lips of an American President.

It was not an arraignment, not an argument, not an exposition. There was no evidence of rancor, vituperation, spleen or prejudice, and no attempt of unnecessary defense.

It was all gentleness, compassionate kindness and yet withal the most forcible and profound presentation of facts and figures concerning a universal cause and crisis ever given to a world in need of intelligent suggestion, rich council and careful guidance. Shall we in after years have an added remembrance of the wisdom in our reaction, or shall we suffer the everlasting shame which can only attend the thoughtless and unthinkable neglect of duty.

Herbert Hoover must be continued in the leadership of our people and party.

We are not at sea—our feet are planted on the solid rock of a saving grace, the basic principle of reason and sober judgment. The eventual emergence in absolute safety.

CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

JOLLY, round, red Mr. Sun was just going to bed behind the Purple Hills as Peter Rabbit stole into the Old Orchard. It was just that beautiful hour between daytime and nighttime when the little people of the Green Meadows and the Green Forest who have been busy all day are beginning to get drowsy and are thinking of going to bed, while those who have been sleeping all day are getting sleepy-winks out of their eyes and are thinking about filling empty stomachs. The Old Orchard always is very pleasant at this hour. Peter likes to steal up there and sit for a while near Johnny Chuck's doorstep to chat with Johnny Chuck while they watch the first of the Black Shadows steal among the trees and listen to the good-night twitters of the feathered folk and the beautiful evening song of Brownie the Thrush.

"Chitter-chitter-chitter-chit! Chitter-chitter-chitter-chit! Chit, chit, chit, chit!" Peter put his head back to look up. Over the tops of the trees raced a black form, this way, that way, turning, wheeling and then with rapid wing beats racing straight ahead, all the time shouting joyously. It was a bird, of course. Flitter the Bat is the only animal who can fly, and he cannot fly anything like the darling little black form Peter was watching. It was Sooty the Swift.

"Sooty gets more fun out of flying than anybody I know of," declared Peter. "Just listen to him! He shouts just for pure joy of using those queer little wings. I know how he feels. He feels just as I do when I race around and kick up my heels just for pure joy in being alive. Sometimes I wish I could shout then, but you know I can't, because I haven't any voice for shouting. Just listen to Sooty! He isn't much to look at, but he seems to have more fun than any bird I know of unless it is Skimmer the Swallow, and then after all, Sooty is a swallow himself."

"Huh!" It was Johnny Chuck. "Huh!" exclaimed Johnny again.

Peter turned to look at Johnny and was puzzled at the look of disgust on Johnny's face. "Huh!" exclaimed Johnny Chuck once more. "For a fellow who goes about as much as you do and pokes his nose into other people's affairs as much as you do, Peter Rabbit, you know mighty little about your neighbors. Whoever told you that Sooty is a swallow?"

"Why—why—why, I don't know that any one did," replied Peter slowly, looking more puzzled than ever. "I didn't have to be told. Any one can see that he is a swallow just to look at him."

"Huh!" Johnny Chuck seemed very fond of that exclamation. "I suppose any one can make themselves see what they want to see if they don't use their brains enough to find out other things. Sooty isn't a swallow, and never will be a swallow. He belongs to another family altogether. He's a swift. That's what he is—a swift."

Peter didn't know just what to say. Johnny Chuck spoke as if he knew exactly what he was talking about, and Peter had to admit to himself that he really didn't know a thing about Sooty. "Chitter-chitter-chitter chit-chit!" Once more Sooty raced high overhead shouting joyously.

"He looks like a swallow anyway," declared Peter, "but if you say he isn't one I suppose he isn't. If he is a swift he is well named, for he certainly is swift enough in the air. I guess I don't know much about him."

"I guess you don't," declared Johnny Chuck, if you call him a swallow. The trouble with a lot of people is that they don't know anything about their neighbors and just guess at things. You've known Sooty by sight a long time, haven't you?"

"Ever since I can remember," replied Peter. "Summer wouldn't be summer without Sooty cutting up and racing around up in the air. But I've never seen him close to, or sitting still, and I've never thought much about him. He never before seemed to me very interesting."

"Huh!" exclaimed Johnny Chuck. Everybody is interesting if you take the trouble to get acquainted."

To Find Truth

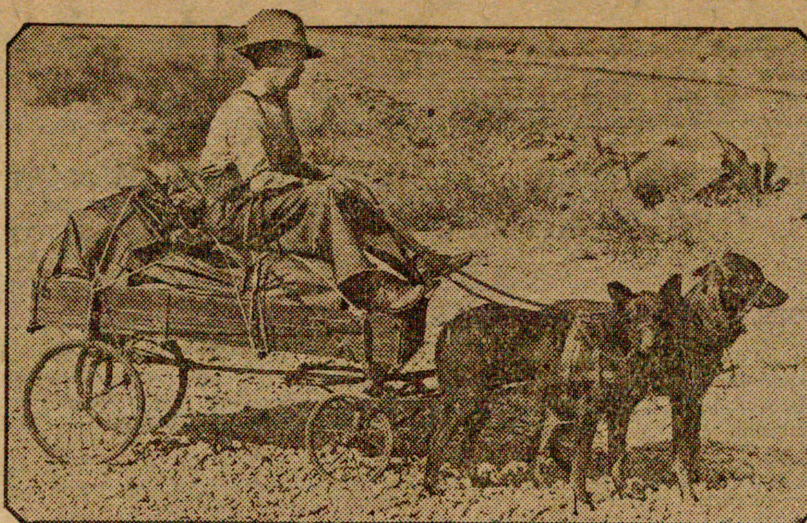

There are two ways of reaching truth—by reasoning it out and by feeling it out. All the profoundest truths are felt out. The deep glances into truth are got by love. Love a man, that is the best way of understanding him. Feel a truth, that is the only way of comprehending it.—F. W. Robertson.

SOME SWEET THINGS

THERE are many people who do not enjoy a meringue. The following pie is made with the eggs folded in and makes a filling like sponge cake:

Lemon Sponge Pie.—Cream two tablespoonsful of butter with two of flour, add the well-beaten egg yolks of two eggs, the juice and rind of a lemon. Mix well and stir in one cupful of milk, three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, and fold in the beaten whites. Pour into an uncooked pastry shell and bake until firm.

Sweetmeat Wishes.—Put one-half cupful of candied orange peel, one cupful each of dates, figs, walnut meats and candied cherries through the meat chopper, add one tablespoonful of lemon juice and knead until well mixed. Toss on a board dusted well with powdered sugar, roll out to one-fourth inch in thickness and cut into small rounds with a cutter. When stiff frost with a plain orange icing and decorate with bits of cherry and citron.

Orange Squares.—Soak two tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one-fourth cupful of cold water. Add one-fourth cupful of chopped nuts to the gelatin, add one-fourth cupful of orange juice, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and the grated rind of an orange. Boil together one cupful of sugar and three-fourths cupful of hot water to the soft ball stage, remove from the heat and add the gelatin, stir and cook for ten minutes. Pour into a pan and sprinkle with four tablespoonfuls of chopped nutmeats.

Fig Pudding.—Cream one-third of a cupful of fat with one cupful of sugar. Add the beaten yolks of two eggs, one-half cupful of milk added alternately with two cupfuls of flour sifted with four teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one teaspoonful of salt. Fold in the beaten egg whites. Bake in a quick oven. Cut into rounds or oblongs, place a spoonful of whipped cream over the top and place a steamed fig on each. Serve with a lemon sauce.

COOKIE DAY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHAT day's cookie day
Up your way, hey?
Our day's Saturday
Up our way.

You ought to see the fixing,
You ought to see the flour,
You ought to see the mixing,
It takes about an hour,
You ought to see the batter,
You ought to see the pan,
It's really quite a matter
For anyone to plan.

Talk about Monday,
And Tuesday, too,
Talk about Wednesday,
The whole week through,
Talk about Thursday,
And Friday some,
But Saturday's cookie day,
Um, um, um!

Burns and Scalds

A burn is the effect of dry heat of 140 degrees F., and over, a scald being the result of moist heat of over 120 degrees F. Clinically there is no distinction between them. Death usually results when one-third of the total area of the body is affected, however superficially.

BANKING HOUSES IN HISTORY OF WORLD

In Existence as Early as Year 600 B. C.

The earliest banks, if such they can be called, date back many centuries before the Christian era, and were generally conducted by governments in an attempt to prevent plunder of the money they had issued.

The early places of business were usually the temples. The cuneiform writings disclose, however, that as early as 600 B. C. private banks were known in Babylonia. The firm of Egibi & Son of Babylon is the first private banking house of which record survives, its name perhaps setting the precedent for the nepotism that has ever since characterized the business.

But to a banker named Caeus, at Alexandria, in 260 B. C., must go the credit for offering what appears to be the first banking service really deserving of the name. He paid interest on deposits, permitted withdrawals upon demand, and kept his bank open for business every hour of the day and night!

Despite its auspicious start, banking gradually came into public disfavor, and that disfavor culminated in a prohibition of interest during the reign of Alexander Severus of Rome, at the time when that country was dominant in world affairs.

The fecundity of money came to be regarded as a monstrous thing, and in the course of time the Jews were the only people willing to brave the storm of criticism that met every attempt to establish banks. They organized what were known as poverty banks, or lending houses, and by the Fifth century of our era these makeshift banks were the only lending institutions in Italy.

The effect of the long interdiction of interest by pope and emperor was a virtual paralysis of trade. All commercial enterprise waned, and poverty seized the land. The period is still known as the Dark ages. The abhorrence of interest, however, gradually declined, and during the Eighth century the monks took over the poverty banks from the Jews.

This covert recognition of banking by the church did much to restore it to its former good estate, and it gained rapidly in prestige during the next two centuries, when the popes confirmed formally the right to charge interest and to demand adequate collateral on loans.—Clifford B. Reeves in the American Mercury.

Radio Links Nations

Direct wireless transmission from Belgium to the United States was inaugurated, on the Belgian national holiday, by King Albert, who spoke briefly over the National and Columbia broadcasting networks, expressing his "sincere wish that the progress of science, of which this is so signal an example, may find its equivalent in a progress toward a better understanding between nations."

Bear Merely Curious

Driving to Lubec, Maine, at an early hour in the morning, James E. Cook found his right of way disputed by a huge bear which arose from the thick grass bordering the road. Mr. Cook stopped his automobile and, after the bear had leisurely looked it over, it turned and ambled away.

Indistinct Message That Had Daddy "Sitting Up"

An Indianapolis man was accustomed to receiving a telephone call from his ten-year-old son each afternoon. The call came as usual on a recent day.

"Hello, son, how is everything at home?" he began.

The reply was indistinct, but sounded as if the boy had said: "Mummy's bad sick."

Startled, the man held the receiver more tightly. "She is? What's the matter with her?"

"I don't know. She only ate half a carrot and now she's eating grass." This information was more startling than ever. The man had sudden visions of his wife having lost her mind and parading through the yard, gnawing at grass.

"Listen, son, talk louder. Did you say mother was sick?"

"Naw," came the disgusted reply, "not mother—bunny."—Indianapolis News.

Discouraging the Kicker

The mechanical farrier has appeared in the western states of America for the handling of vicious steeds brought in to be shod. The animal is placed in a rugged wooden frame and haltered there. A sling operated with a winch and rope cable then lifts the horse until his feet barely touch the floor. In this position the outlaw is practically helpless and much of the fight already taken out of him. A metal clamp attached to a pipe arm is then fastened around the fetlock of the hoof to be shod, and by means of gears controlling the movement of the arm, the foot is raised to the position desired.

Shad hurried to the doctor's office. The learned physician sat reading.

"I love you, boy," he said. "Your eyes are as bright as the evening star. Your face is like a May morning. Sit down. I have little to tell you save this. The young lady is now in our village."

"In our village?"

"Yes, I brought her down out of the woods yesterday. It is a secret that she is at Miss Spenlow's with her child. The child needs her and she needs the child for a time. The Friendless fund is sufficient to provide for them. I have had a long talk with her. She is Bumpy Brown's daughter."

"I thought so," Shad answered.

"The two were like oil and water," the doctor went on. "Naturally she was ashamed of him. The girl was proud, handsome and rather high-spirited. He was a seedy, irresponsible old liar who was often tipsy."

Shad interrupted the doctor. "We have learned that his lies were not genuine. They were all true. The district attorney has met the colonel of his regiment. He says that Brown was a great soldier and a hero. He would never apply for a pension."

The doctor settled back, surprised, and said:

"Good heavens! It's curious how a mere surmise will grow into common report. It needs only an evil flavor."

Doctor Gorse lighted his pipe and for a little time sat smoking thoughtfully.

"In what you tell me I catch a glimmer of new possibilities," he remarked. "It would be strange if the last should be first and the first should be last."

The doctor paused and added: "I am convinced that the girl is the key to our mystery. She is still obscure. I suppose that she loves the man who has wronged her. She is between fires. I have brought her here to see what will happen. We suspect Royce, and with good reason. Yet I hope that for a time the district attorney will let him alone. The situation should suffer no disturbance. It has not been carelessly planned."

"Shall I bring Colonel Blake here?"

"No. I had better not see him and it would be just as well if he kept out of this village so that circumstances may drift naturally and undisturbed with wind and tide. I think that you had better keep away from Miss Spenlow's and wait for further advice. Sit down at my desk and write a line to your chief. If you don't mind, I'll dictate the letter."

Shad wrote down these words from the doctor's lips:

"My friend advises that you make no move toward Royce or any other person in the matter of the mystery of Amity Dam until you hear from me again. He hopes that the present posture of affairs, if undisturbed, will lead to definite results."

Shad posted the letter and returned to Brown's cove.

CHAPTER XII

The Doctor's Artificial Lightning.

The boy resumed his work in the little house on the river. He had begun to feel rather wise and learned. He was getting a vocabulary that astonished his friends. The new words were a useful asset, but the fun he had, especially that he derived from the wise and droll observations of the tinker, was of greater value. His days were enriched by cheering visits from Bony, much good food and many a merry conference. A letter came from Colonel Blake saying that he had been summoned to Chicago. He hoped that he would be returning soon with important news. Bony arrived late one afternoon with a message from the doctor. It said:

"Please come to my study tonight at seven. I want to confer with you."

He and Bony set out for the Dam at once. As soon as they were on the road the able satirist began:

"I've told you about that girl and the dear child that Miss Spenlow is so crazy over. She shoves it on me every day and wants to know if I don't think it's the sweetest thing in the world. Gosh all hemlock! I'd light out o' there if I could. But I'm nailed down. The doctor is a smart old cuss—deep as a well. Ye know he told Miss Spenlow to put that girl an' the baby in a room on the first floor that opens on a little back veranda. He said that he didn't want the girl to have to go up an' down stairs. So she and the baby sleep alone nights on the first floor. My window is about ten feet above hers. The doctor sends for me an' what does he do but give me a job. He says—I want you to sit by your front window without a light every night till twelve o'clock an' watch the dooryard an' see if anyone comes near the house. If you should see a man keep very quiet. Don't disturb him, but next day let me know what happens."

"Well, I put on a sweater an' sat smokin' by the open window with nothing to do but keep my eye peeled till midnight an' hear the roosters crow an' the water goin' over the dam."

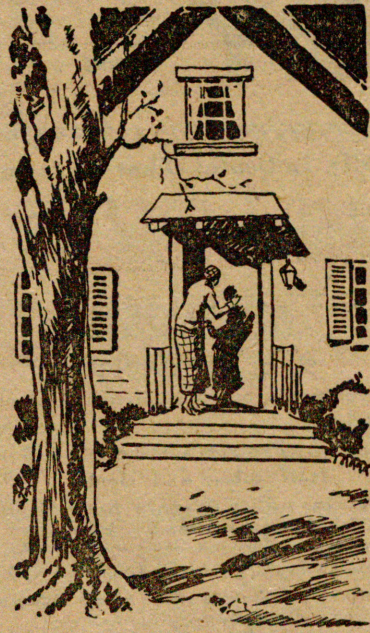

Nothin' happened till las' night. It was darker than pitch. I heard a move outside. In a minute I could see some one slyin' up to the side o' the house. Then I heard a little tap on the window pane below. There was another little tap an' in a minute darned if some one didn't come out. I couldn't see who 'twas but knew d—n' well 'twas the fair maid. The two o' 'em sneaked off into that spruce thicket that goes down to the river. They stayed about ten minutes. Then the girl come back alone an' sneaked into the house. I told the doctor an' he sent me down for you."

Shad arrived at the doctor's at the hour appointed.

"Now I have a rather important job for you," said the wise physician when they were seated together. "The thing has happened which I knew would come to pass. I gave Bony leave to tell you about it. I suppose that he has done so."

"Yes, he told me when we were coming up."

"The man he saw is undoubtedly the girl's lover. You see this is a case of burning love. It's a dangerous proposition. When you get its positive and negative poles close together something is bound to happen. We put the young lady in the center of the stage and the man couldn't keep away from her. Of course Betsy Spenlow has spread the news of her coming."

"Then the Girl Came Back Alone and Sneaked Into the House."

"I suppose that we had better have some officers on hand and arrest him when he comes again," Shad proposed.

"Well, that is crude. It wouldn't be conclusive. The situation is not quite ready for such a downright proceeding. Let's use our brains in the matter. I am prepared to take a photograph of him."

"How would you do that in the night?"

"Easily. The time favors us. There is no moon. The weather is mild. In that evergreen thicket is a little mossy glade—a romantic trysting place for lovers. Undoubtedly they went to that spot and will go there again tonight. We will place our camera in the glade with its shutter open. At the right moment a little powder mixed with magnesium will give us a quick flash and we will get our photograph. If we do our work well, they will think it lightning and be none the wiser."

"How do you get the flash?"

"With electricity. You have learned to telegraph and you know how the spark is made. I have borrowed a battery from Smithers. It is wired and ready. You remember how the spark played between two pieces of metal when you shifted the lever and touched the key. Well, I have made a key-board. You will be hidden in the bushes with the board in hand. When you press its key a spark will ignite the powder and magnesium. We will go now and set our trap. I have a small dark lantern to help us when we need it."

They put on their overcoats and went out. With a small bag in his hand the doctor led the boy down the deserted street and through a garden to the river shore. They followed the bank of the stream a little time and entered the rear end of the spruce thicket. They made their way to the glade. On the side of it opposite the trail leading from Miss Spenlow's dooryard they fastened the camera about breast-high to the trunk of a small tree. They covered it with twigs so that only the lens was visible. On a sheet of tin a little back of the camera they poured the powder and magnesium. Some twigs were scattered on the floor of the glade at its entrance so that Shad would know by their crackling when the two were near enough to be photographed. The communicating wires, the battery and key were carefully placed. Shad's station was behind the base of a large pine tree.

"We are all right if it doesn't rain," said the doctor. "You are to come here about nine o'clock and find your place with the dark lantern and sit down and wait. You will hear them coming. Get ready. When you are sure that they are in the glade, touch the key. They may come tonight. If not we must shut our camera before daylight and take up our flash material and when night comes again set the works for another trial. We will catch them soon. They are bound to come again. I would look for them this very night. The time is favorable, the ground bare, the weather mild. Such a condition cannot last long, and they know it."

Shad returned with his friend to the study where, for an hour or more, he amused himself with the doctor's microscope. At nine o'clock he set out warmly clad with a blanket on his arm and the dark lantern in his hand.

The lights were going out in the little old-fashioned village of Amity Dam, where almost every one went to bed early and arose at dawn. Shad lighted his lantern when he entered the evergreen thicket at the water boundary of the Spenlow place. Mostly with no light to guide him he made his way through the dense growth of young spruces to the big tree. There with a short flash he located his key, placed his blanket, sat down and put out the light in his lantern. He was in black darkness. He sat for hours listening, and hearing only the steady splash of the falls, some three hundred yards from where he sat, the barking of dogs in the distant countryside and now and then a passing team or the crowing of a cock in the village. Darkness and silence are not agreeable comrades for a boy of a lively imagination. The hours were very long. Some small creature, probably a wood-mouse or a chipmunk, startled him with the noise of its movements in the near thicket. He wondered if there really was any such a thing in the world as a ghost. The night grew stiller. He dimly heard the familiar sound of Miss Spenlow's tall clock as it struck eleven. Long after that hour he heard a team cross the bridge. Slowly it came up the road and passed. Somewhere, not far away—perhaps in the shed of the Smithers' store—it stopped. Was it Royce? He now began to think that his waiting would be rewarded. He was keenly alert. A few dragging minutes followed. Would they never come? Suddenly, the welcome sound of stealthy footsteps! They were coming to the trap. Would the mystery be solved in the next minute or two? The sound of their feet was near. He could hear them brushing the bushes. Cautiously he picked up the piece of board on which his key was fastened. He heard the crackling of the brittle twigs. The girl and her companion stopped. She was speaking in a low tone. Curiosity checked the hand of the boy.

"Oh, I wish that I had listened to my father," the girl was saying.

In a low tone the man spoke:

"You don't know how I love you. I would rather die than live without you. When you are a little stronger we will go to Australia together and be happy. My G—d! I would kill any one who came between us. I get desperate thinking of you."

Chimpanzee Proved He Had Curiosity, Anyway

Some time ago a scientist was anxious to discover whether chimpanzees possessed any power of reasoning. In the cage of one of them he hung a banana out of the ape's reach. He also placed in the cage two or three wooden boxes. The chimpanzee took a long while to think it out, eventually he placed one box on top of another, stood on the pile and reached the banana.

Then the scientist gave him another test, but it occurred to him that the chimpanzee might think more quickly if he was not being observed. The chimpanzee was placed in a room, and the scientist, going outside, put his eye to the keyhole to watch the proceedings. He was amazed to find that he was looking into another eye. The chimpanzee had got there first!

Chimpanzees seem to have some kind of reasoning power, and many believe that if taken in hand young enough they could be educated to a remarkable degree.

Special Postage Stamps

Athletics and field sports of almost every kind have been the subject of special issues of postage stamps in many parts of the world, which make a striking and original collection. When the ancient festival of Olympic games was first revived at Athens five and twenty years ago, the Greek government gave as a contribution toward the expenses of the undertaking the proceeds of the sale of a series of stamps commemorating the glories of the Olympiads of former days, the classic designs of which embraced a contest of gladiators, a disk thrower and a quadriga or racing chariot all copied from famous statues or bas-reliefs.

Lesson for October 9

THE CHRISTIAN IN THE FAMILY

Luke 2:4-52; 10:38-48.
GOLDEN TEXT—I will behave myself wisely in a perfect way. O when wilt thou come unto me? I will walk within my house with a perfect heart. Psalm 101:2.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Happy Family.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Home Life of Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Being a Christian at Home.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Making the Home Christian.

Confessedly our subject is a strange one to fit to the texts selected by the Lesson Committee. Jesus is the central person in both texts. It is manifestly improper to think and speak of him as being Christian. He is the eternal Son of God made flesh (John 1:14). A Christian is one regenerated by the Holy Spirit and joined to Jesus Christ by faith on the ground of his redemptive work. Two views of him are presented in these texts:

1. Jesus in the Home of His Mother and Joseph (Luke 2:4-52).

1. Jesus growing (v. 40). While Jesus Christ was divine, yet his deity did not interfere with his development as a human being. The processes of his physical and mental growth were the same as those of any normal human being.

a. He grew and waxed strong. It was necessary for his body to develop. His brain, nerves, and muscles must not only attain unto their proper sizes, but must become correlated.

b. "Filled with wisdom." His mother doubtless was his teacher in those early years. It is reasonable to assume that she taught him to commit Bible verses to memory, and told him the great narratives of patriots and prophets of the Old Testament.

c. "The grace of God was upon him." God's love, favor and tender care were upon him.

2. Jesus found in the Temple (vv. 41-47). At the age of twelve the Jewish child took his place as a worshiper in the temple. He was then considered a "child of the law." Being conscious of his mission, Jesus tarried behind in the temple when his mother and Joseph left Jerusalem after the Passover. When they made search for him, he was found in the temple. Observe.

a. He was found sitting (v. 46). He was no passing visitor or sight-seer, but at home in his father's house.

b. He was hearing the teachers of God's Word (v. 46). He was eager to learn God's will.

c. He asked questions (v. 46). His growing mind inquired after truth.

d. He answered questions (v. 47). His answers astonished those who heard him.

3. Mary's complaint (vv. 48-50). She remonstrated with him for his behavior. To this he replied in a dignified, yet tender manner. He made no apology, showing that he was more than the son of Mary. God was his father.

4. Jesus' obedience (v. 51). Though he was fully conscious of his divine being and mission, he lived a life of filial obedience, teaching us that obedience to parents is pleasing to God, and a duty which will be discharged faithfully by those who have the spirit of Christ.

11. Jesus in Martha's Home (Luke 10:38-42).

1. Jesus welcomed into Martha's home (v. 38). Though Jesus had no home of his own, into Martha's home he could come at any time. This home was his special retreat in the last days of his ministry on earth.

2. Mary sitting at Jesus' feet (v. 39). Mary had a peculiar spiritual insight which prompted her to sit at Jesus' feet and listen to his words.

3. Martha's complaint (v. 40). She desired doubtless to prepare the very best possible meal for Jesus. He prefers the love which concerns itself with himself and his message to any personal ministry. Because of her failure to see this, she was "cumbered with much serving." She not only found fault with Mary, but found fault with Jesus for allowing Mary to sit at his feet while the dinner was unfinished.

4. Jesus' reply (vv. 41-42).

a. He rebukes Martha, telling her that she is careful and troubled about many things. Those who are primarily concerned with the Master are anxious for nothing (Phil. 4:6).

The one thing that is needful for everybody is to sit at the feet of Jesus.

b. He commended Mary, saying "Mary hath chosen that good part which shall not be taken away from her."

Never Say Can't

Never tell a young person that anything cannot be done. God may have been waiting for centuries for somebody ignorant enough of the impossible to do that thing.—John Andrew Holmes.

The Golden Rule

"No philosophy has ever improved upon the Golden Rule, and the most gorgeous tapestry of trickery looks like a rag alongside the simple beauties of a square deal."

"Lucile is the Happiest Girl"

So many mothers nowadays talk about giving their children fruit juices, as if this were a new discovery. As a matter of fact, for over fifty years, mothers have been accomplishing results far surpassing anything you can secure from home prepared fruit juices, by using pure, wholesome California Fig Syrup, which is prepared under the most exacting laboratory supervision from ripe California Figs, richest of all fruits in laxative and nourishing properties.

It's marvelous to see how bilious, weak, feverish, sallow, constipated, under-nourished children respond to its gentle influence; how their breath clears up, color flames in their cheeks, and they become sturdy, playful, energetic again. A Western mother, Mrs. H. J. Stoll, Valley P. O., Nebraska, says: "My little daughter, Roma Lucile, was constipated from babyhood. I became worried about her and decided to give her some California Fig Syrup. It stopped her constipation quick; and the way it improved her color and made her pick up made me realize how run-down she had been. She is so sturdy and well now, and always in such good humor that neighbors say she's the happiest girl in the West."

Like all good things, California Fig Syrup is imitated, but you can always get the genuine by looking for the name "California" on the carton.

Rooster Leads Quail Flock

Martin L. Jackson, custodian of the Montezuma Castle National monument in Arizona did not think a young rooster he had purchased for frying pan purposes quite plump enough, so he decided to keep the fowl a while and fatten him up. The rooster was at first received unfavorably by other bird residents of the Montezuma valley, but eventually the gambler quail became friendly with him. When it became evident that a flock of 35 of them had adopted him as their leader Jackson could not bring himself to carry out his original intention so the rooster was allowed to go free.

Artificial Heart

A Vienna physician, Doctor Eisenmenger, has perfected a machine or "artificial heart" that pumps the blood when the real heart stops. By use of this new apparatus persons apparently dead have been brought back to life. It keeps the blood circulating for a while although the heart has stopped. The machine is designed to apply alternate pressure and suction to that part of the chest containing the heart, so that blood is alternately sucked into that organ and forced out again, simulating approximately the normal circulation maintained by the heartbeat.

Medical Sheep Shears

Somehow or other modern Russia manages to be different and to do things differently. She even does so when it comes to shearing sheep. What they really do is to pluck the wool right off the poor creatures. However, they dope the animals first with a medicine which makes them shed their wool. To prepare the sheep for the plucking a small dose of a preparation of heavy mineral salts is given them. This is said to act on the synthetic nerve system and in two or three days the wool is loose enough to pick off.

Wanted No Funeral Grief

That there be no display of grief at his funeral was asked in the will of Reginald F. Arthur, an attorney, of South Brent, England, who died recently. "Merely carry me when nobody is about to my grave and let me be," the will read. He stipulated that there was to be "no clergymen, no church service, no mourning flowers and no hearse or mourning coaches."

Triangle Talkies

How's everybody this week? We all feel fine after our last big business meeting which was held last Monday evening. A big committee of six are planning a big Halloween party for our next regular social night, as it just happens to fall on the 31st. It was first decided that we would rent either a couple of hotel rooms or a pent house. But when Harold blushed so hard, we had to change our plans. So we'll just all have to await results.

The members who were present also had their pictures taken and the proof doesn't look so bad.

Basketball practices begin the first of November on Tuesday and Friday evenings and are we all enthused—not much.

Have noticed that Bernice still goes with Les—still likes him as much as ever. Pardon me, I didn't mean to be so personal.

The weather is bringing skating and tobogganing closer every day, so it won't be long now.

Thanks much for listenin' folks.

The greatest line-up of drivers that has ever started over the Robey Chicago Speedway will face the starter Sunday afternoon, October 9. In addition to the automobile races there will be other thrilling stunts featuring a head-on collision between two automobiles when the drivers crash at a speed of forty miles an hour directly in front of the grandstand. Jack Early will attempt a new stunt by crashing through a burning double board wall. This is the first time that anyone has ever attempted driving a motorcycle through a burning wall and Early is the only man in the world who crashes the double wall. He has many imitators who use the single wall but Early now intends to do them one better by putting the additional thrill to it by adding the flames. There will be Auto Polo between the Canadian and the American teams, the two best-known Polo outfits in existence. Floyd Pryr will somersault an automobile directly in front of the grandstand. Vincent Sanger will roll an automobile over several times sideways. This is a new stunt for the Chicago district and is considered one of the greatest thrills ever undertaken.

There will be six automobile races with such well-known drivers as Karl Young, Tony Wellman, Mark Billman, Red Campbell, Walter Zale, Joe Kneisley, Shorty Wolf and 25 others. The entry list will probably be the largest that has ever run in a meet at Robey and the races are so arranged that each driver will get a chance in some race or other during the day's program. Instead of twelve drivers in the feature event the management has decided to start sixteen which is the largest number that has ever participated in a race over the fast Robey Chicago Speedway. The qualifying trials will start at ten Sunday morning and the race at three. In case of a rain-out on Sunday, the races and stunts will be run on the following Sunday.

Passengers on Dozen Ocean Liners Can Talk with Land while in Mid Ocean

The twelve ships sketched on this map are all equipped with ship-to-shore telephone service. They are the S. S. Leviathan, Majestic, Olympic, Homeric, Empress of Britain, Monarch of Bermuda, Deutschland, Bremen, Europa, Albert Ballin, Hamburg, and New York. Right: A passenger telephoning while aboard the S. S. Leviathan. Left: Technicians in Long Distance Headquarters building in New York, where transatlantic and ship-to-shore radio telephone calls are switched to the country's wire telephone lines.

During the past summer, the number of transatlantic liners having radio telephone service with North American points while the vessels are at sea has doubled. The addition of six vessels of the North German Lloyd and the Hamburg American lines brings the fleet of liners so equipped to a round dozen. As in the case of the six ships already included in the ship-to-shore service, the newly added vessels reach the Bell System land telephone lines through the radio telephone stations of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company at Forted River, N. J., and Ocean Gate, N. J.

Can Reach All Bell Telephones—Each vessel while at sea is able to reach all Bell telephones, as well as those connecting with the System in the United States, Canada, Mexico, and Cuba. Through ship-to-shore telephone stations in Europe, the liners may hold conversations with points in the British Isles and on the continent of Europe.

The first of the vessels to be recently included in the service was the S. S. Deutschland, which was added to the telephone-equipped fleet early in May. On June 7 the Bremen was added to the list, followed within a few days by its sister ship, the Europa. During the next four weeks the Steamships Albert Ballin, Hamburg, and New York were included in the service, in the order named.

Voices Switched to Land Lines—The apparatus on all six of these liners is owned and operated by D. E. B. E. G., the German radio operating company. A voice spoken into a special ship-to-shore telephone on any of the vessels while en route to or from this country speeds by short wave radio to the Forted River receiving station of the A. T. and T. Company. Here the radio waves are demodulated and the voice waves pass over land wires and cables to the control room in the new Long Distance Building at 32 Sixth Avenue, New York. At this point the ship-to-shore operator routes the call over the appropriate long distance line to its destination. The answering voice follows the same route back through the Long Distance Building in New York City, thence traveling over land wires and cables to the ship-to-shore transmitting station at Ocean Gate, N. J. There, by means of directional antenna aimed at the ship's course, the voice is dispatched by short wave radio to the liner as it plows through the waters of the North Atlantic.

Service Was Begun in 1929

The first vessel to be equipped for regular commercial ship-to-shore telephone service was the Leviathan, to which service was extended on December 8, 1929. The following Spring the service was extended to the Majestic, Olympic, and Homeric of the White Star Lines. Last year, service was opened with the Empress of Britain of the Canadian Pacific Line, and the Monarch of Bermuda of the Furness Bermuda Line.

Voices Leap the Pacific as Telephone Service Now Reaches West to Hawaii

How Modern Telephony Outdistances Space: Scenes in Connection With the Recently Opened Telephone Service Between Hawaii and North America.

For the first time in history, voice-to-voice holiday greetings could be exchanged last Christmas between friends in Hawaii and in North America. For on December 23, 1931, radio telephone service was formally opened to make conversation possible between persons in the United States, Canada, Cuba and Mexico, and those on the principal islands of the Hawaiian Archipelago. Hawaii thus becomes the first of the outlying dependencies of the United States to be linked with the latter by direct voice communication.

Two separate paths form the voice channel to Hawaii. In its course from one telephone to another, the voice receives an amplification measured in millions. The transmitting station for the transpacific service is at Dixon, California, 20 miles southwest of Sacramento, and the receiving station at Point Reyes, 35 miles north of San Francisco. Both the Dixon and Point Reyes stations have recently been completed, and equipment installed, by Transpacific Communication Company, Ltd., subsidiary of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company.

San Francisco Is Central Point for North America

The station at Dixon transmits to a station at Koko Head, 12 miles from Honolulu, and Point Reyes receives from a station at Kahuku Point, 30 miles from that city. These stations in Hawaii are operated by the Radio Corporation of America. The channels from the United States are connected not only to the wire network of the Mutual Telephone Company in Hawaii but also to an inter-island short wave radio telephone system which it has recently inaugurated.

San Francisco is the focal point for the new overseas system. Through the transpacific control room in the San Francisco telephone office, subscribers in Hawaii are connected with the United States, Canada, Cuba and Mexico. A special switchboard handles Hawaiian calls. This switchboard, staffed by highly trained operators, is fitted with direct circuits not only to the radio transmitting and receiving stations but to the principal cities of the United States and to the switching points for other parts of North America.

A New Development in Directional Antennas

Simplicity and compactness mark the new type antennas for Dixon and Point Reyes. These antennas, developed by the Bell Telephone Laboratories, in New York, are diamond shaped. The arrangement of the wires makes them highly directional, resulting in great power economy.

The diamond at Dixon is formed by two copper wires mounted on 70 foot poles. The antenna is "aimed" at the receiving station in Hawaii by placing the longer axis along the great circle course between the two stations. At the western end of the antenna is a system of iron wire looped back and forth on a line of 20 foot poles. This dissipates energy which would otherwise be radiated in an easterly direction. Some 1200 feet of wire is required to expend this energy. The shape of the antenna checks radiations from either side. The system thus transmits in only one direction.

The receiving antenna at Point Reyes is a diamond formed by a single copper wire likewise mounted on poles. Just as the transmitting antenna concentrates its energy in one direction, so this antenna, due to its shape, is sensitive only to signals traveling along the line of the major axis. This is, of course, placed along the great circle course from the Hawaiian transmitting station. A circuit at the western end of the antenna dissipates the signals received from the eastward.

The Dixon transmitting station has a rated power output of 20 kilowatts. With a highly directional antenna this is ample to bridge the 2,400 miles between the West Coast and Hawaii. It uses several frequencies between 7,000 and 21,000 kilocycles, corresponding to a range of 40 to 14 meters. The Point Reyes receiving station has eight stages of amplification, in addition to a high frequency and a low frequency detector. Automatic volume control minimizes fading or variations in volume.

"Speech Inverter" Insures Privacy on the Air

With the exception of the antennas, the equipment to be used in the transpacific service is much the same as that now employed on the transatlantic channels. In the control room is the "speech inverter," which gives the conversation privacy over the radio channel, and the "vocoder," a device to eliminate the echoes which would otherwise make it impossible to talk in both directions on the same radio wave length. In addition to this, there is the wealth of associated apparatus at radio station control room and switchboard which have been brought in by the development engineers piece by piece to increase the intelligibility and reliability on voice channels across oceans.

The inauguration of the service to Hawaii reflects not only an experience of five years by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. in telephone service across the Atlantic Ocean, but months of experiment in determining the best arrangements for bridging the seas between the West Coast and Hawaii.

Elliott W. Sproul In Race Again

Former Congressman Elliott W. Sproul, who is back in the political picture as Republican candidate for representative from the Third Congressional district, was endorsed last week by the PalyleOr club, an organization of descendants of pioneers who settled in the Townships of Palos Lyons, Lemont, and Orland.

The group unanimously ratified a resolution pledging support to the Sproul candidacy and urging his return to congress.

It was signed on behalf of the organization by John W. Cavanaugh, president; James Molony, secretary; Mrs. Margaret Koller, president of the auxiliary; Rev. Vincent Brummer John J. Coburn, and William J. Molony.

The resolution follows:
"Whereas, an unparalleled depression has fallen upon the nation, so vast and far-reaching that it has disturbed and destroyed the business and social life of the people of the United States to an extent so alarming that the foundations of this government and civilization are threatened, and

"Whereas, we have a keen realization that in this crisis the national government should be under the care, direction and safe-keeping of only the best, efficient, well-trained, and patriotic representatives of the people and that none but the best qualified should be selected to direct the nation's fate;

"Therefore, with a keen sense of responsibility on the part of this great organization, particularly addressed to the citizens and voters of the third congressional district, the PalyleOr club, a fraternal organization whose membership is made up of the descendants of the pioneers of the Townships of Palos, Lyons, Lemont and Orland, at all times true and loyal in its support of any member, heartily endorses and pledges its support to Honorable Elliott W. Sproul.

"He is an illustrious and honored member of this organization, who, for five consecutive terms, represented the Third Congressional district in the House of Congress with distinction and ability.

"His long experience in that illustrious branch of the national government and his broad acquaintance and great influence in the connections that he has made at Washington, pre-eminently qualify him to represent the people of the Third Congressional district and the nation at large.

"This club and its membership of more than 50,000 pledges its support in every honorable way to secure the return to congress as representative of the Third Congressional district, the distinguished statesman, the Honorable Elliott W. Sproul."

The Day After The Night Before

By John T. Clyne

My, what a spree! And O, such a headache! And now for an alibi.

What a glorious time we were having until back in 1929, an English firm ran out of gas and then most everybody in the stock market said, "Damn this man Hoover!"

The ship steaded for a while until those engaged in agriculture discovered that Hoover was diverting the water to the Hoover Dam section while the rest of the country was suffering from drought and then Hoover was cursed again.

Russia began sending wheat into this country and Hoover was accused of sleeping on the job.

Austria and Germany began showing signs of cracking and the President was accused of playing into the hands of the British.

A period of bank failures prevailed and Hoover was charged with incompetency.

The people began hoarding money and economizing in every imaginable way. Factories began slowing up and the ranks of the unemployed increased in numbers and all the while the dear people kept cursing Hoover and occasionally taking a crack at Mellon.

Now, what are the real facts?

As a result of the war, a hysteria took possession of the people and with a loss of all sense of proportion, they started on an orgy of recklessness such as the world never witnessed. This not only applies to America but to a large portion of the Eastern hemisphere.

During the war, there were many who went abroad, others remained at home and engaged in producing the money and other necessities to keep the fighting men going. It required the services of some at home to curb, as much as possible, the pirates who took advantage of the country's peril by exploiting the Government in every way possible. Many of the manufacturers refused to speed up production without a premium; the farmers insisted that wheat could not be produced for less than $2.50 per bushel and corn, $1.75, and the ordinary laborer boosted his price to the limit on every occasion. In fact, very few but what sought an opportunity to participate in the plunder and all this happened under an administration other than Hoover's. Then, pay day had to come. No nation can engage in an orgy of this character and expect to escape punishment.

Our first shock was the collapse of the stock market and we have been groggy ever since.

It just happens that Hoover is the pilot during the present period and no other President ever faced a situation similar and very few, if any, could stand the strain and accomplish as much in solving the problems as the present incumbent of the White House and, notwithstanding the elements of opposition in his own party, Hoover has kept his head and tried to establish an economic balance.

At the first opportunity when the trouble began, the President contacted with the Federal Reserve Bank and called together some of the outstanding business men in this country for the purpose of counsel and advice. This was followed by the creation of what is known as the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, following by other bureaus which, when properly functioning, will go a long way in helping to restore confidence among the people and bring back what is known as prosperity.

There are signs of betterment in many sections. The Dawn of a New Era will follow Hoover's election and there is no other course for those who believe in the principles of the Republican Party to pursue than to vote the Republican ticket. There are always some persons selected under the direct Primary whom we dislike, but they are the candidates of the party and entitled to our votes. If we are good sports and believe in fair play, we will support and vote the entire ticket.

Canning Contest

At Aurora, Illinois, there is at present a very unusual exhibit that is of interest to everyone. Although women are considered the canners of food products in the home, there is something about this exhibit that is interesting to the men of the family, as well as the children. Every man likes to see pickled peaches like his mother used to make. Possibly it may be some strawberry preserves that will make his mouth water. At any rate, men are loath to leave this interesting exhibit after they are once inside the door. So the women need not hesitate to urge the men folks to go with them to the exhibit.

It is hoped that everyone within easy traveling distance will be able to view the thousands of jars of Home-Canned foods that are now on display at the Log Cabin situated on the Central States Fair Grounds at Aurora, Illinois. (From every state in the Union Home Canners have contributed everything from soup to preserves.) From Sweden, England, India, Cuba, and even the Fiji Islands have come jars of interesting foreign products.

October 9th to the 17th are the dates for the Open House at the Log Cabin. Everyone is welcome. There are cooking demonstrations on weekdays from October 10th to the 16th. The hours on Sunday are from Noon to 8:00 p. m., week-days 10:00 a. m. to 6:00 p. m.

Illinois Press Association, Editor

Total estimated building expenditures in Illinois during August involving 990 projects valued at $1,037,007 represented an increase of 7.1 per cent over the preceding month and was the first upturn since last April. The number of projects showed an increase of 17.4 per cent over those authorized in the previous month, according to the Illinois department of labor.

O. E. Barber of Chicago and Grand Rapids, Mich., one hundred and five years of age, was one of the visitors in Springfield for the recent National G. A. R. convention. Mr. Barber, a staff major in the Civil war, claims he attended the first encampment of the G. A. R. and has not missed a national convention since.

The Illinois Library association will hold its thirty-sixth annual conference in Springfield, October 26 to 28. The sessions will be held in the Centennial building and in the Abraham Lincoln hotel, which has been chosen as hotel headquarters. The general theme of the meetings is to be "Reading for an Education."

Walter Moody, superintendent of the state highway police, has been advised by Attorney General Carlstrom that highway policemen may aid in quelling riots, provided the regularly constituted peace officers request their assistance.

O. J. Burandt, Waukegan, business agent of the Teamsters' and Chauffeurs' Independent union of Lake county, was charged with a bombing and with participation in the slugging of three men. State's Attorney A. V. Smith, who obtained warrants for the arrest of Burandt from Justice of the Peace Harold J. Talbot of North Chicago, charged that Burandt's union originally was under the domination of the late George (Red) Barker, slain Chicago gangster.

If the present revenue for state highway construction is not disturbed, the state department of public works and buildings will complete during the remainder of 1932 and during 1933, additional highway and street contracts totaling approximately $38,723,000. This information was given to the legislature by Director Harry Cleveland of the state department and Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer, having been asked for figures showing the amount of work under construction and contracted for.

The $20,000,000 bond issue, to be voted on in November, is to pay off relief obligations assumed earlier in 1932. If the bond issue does not pass, taxpayers will be confronted with another large personal property tax. If it does pass, the money will be diverted from gas tax funds as the individual county sees fit or has obligated itself by past borrowing.

Paul S. Abt, East St. Louis banker, has been appointed by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson as a member of the Illinois emergency relief commission.

Illinois spends less for its state highway maintenance per mile than all but three of the states of the Union. H. H. Cleveland, director of the department of public works and buildings, has stated. The average cost per mile in Illinois for maintenance is $357, according to figures from statistics compiled by the American Association of Highway Officials. A public speaker recently reported that Illinois spent $27,000,000 annually for highway maintenance. This is an error, Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer, reports that the state of Illinois actually spends less than $5,000,000 annually for the maintenance of highways. Only three states in the Union have a lower maintenance cost per mile than Illinois.

The development of new cases of infantile paralysis in Illinois coupled with the existence of a serious epidemic in Pennsylvania that centers in Philadelphia has caused the state department of public health to issue a warning advising parents to be on the alert for the disease. Treatment with convalescent serum which may be obtained free from the state department of public health is recommended for all patients whose condition has not reached the stage of paralysis.

Gathering data for the fifteenth census, census takers traversing Illinois in 1930 interrogated 1,929,396 private families in the state for information. That many private families plus 5,054 quasi family groups (institutions, hotels, etc.), were reported residing in Illinois in that year, and according to the United States Department of Commerce statistics the average population per private family was 3.84 persons.

The validity of the state bail bond act is involved in the case of Kenneth D. Adams, filed for the October term of the State Supreme court on appeal from Cook county. The case involves alleged violation of the act, which attorneys claim is an unconstitutional measure. Indications point to a large number of new cases which will be considered at the coming session.

Just That

He—"Dinner will be served shortly. I've ordered a nice dish of hash for both of us." She—"Of all things!"

The Illinois legislature has adjourned its fourth special session until September 27, after two weeks of discussion of possible relief legislation. A group of bills which passed the senate also were sent to second reading in the house before adjournment. They included the Meents bill, which gives counties the right to issue bonds for relief purposes, the bonds to be guaranteed by proceeds from the state automobile gasoline tax.

Committees of the house and senate of the legislature met in Chicago on September 19 to discuss the several bills now pending before the fourth special session of the Illinois general assembly. The committees met with the Illinois emergency relief commission and representatives of the Reconstruction Finance corporation. An attempt is being made to work out some definite program to present to the legislature when they convene again.

There are 16,000 physically handicapped children in the state, who will be given regular clinical attention through the county organizations, of the Illinois State Medical society, it was decided recently at a meeting of the council of the society in Chicago. Dr. Andy Hall, state director of public health, explained the plight of many poor, unfortunate children to the society.

State Senator William McCauley, Republican, of Olney, who was nominated at the April primary for both the state senate and congress, has decided to stick to the state legislature, having withdrawn from the congressional race.

Contagious diseases in the various counties of the state appear to be on the decline, according to a recent report issued by the state department of public health. Only thirty-five cases of scarlet fever were reported and thirty-four cases of diphtheria.

By prompt payment of their bills, the state departments directly under Gov. Louis L. Emmerson saved $325,823.07 for the state during the year beginning July 1, 1931, and ending July 1, 1932, the department of finance has reported to Governor Emmerson.

Robert R. Parrish of Shelbyville, was elected president of the Illinois Official Court Reporter's association at the group's annual meeting recently in Springfield. Robert M. Ramsay of Morrison was elected vice president and John R. Slenker of Peoria, secretary-treasurer.

A statue of Abraham Lincoln, seated and holding a book, was unveiled at Springfield recently and dedicated by the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil war in tribute to their fathers. The statue was erected in the Sangamon county courthouse lawn.

Rural schools without libraries may borrow collections of books for supplementary reading from the library extension division at Springfield. Application cards, which may be secured from the division, must be signed by the teachers and a school director. Ants "Clean House"

"Wandering ants, in the tropics, sometimes run into a human habitation, and even though the inhabitants may have to cleanse their homes of them for hours or days, they are considered welcome guests," says Hanns Heinz Ewers in "Wonders of the Ant World." "Be that house filled with lice, fleas or cockroaches, when the ants leave not a trace of any other insect remains. Nor do they forget the rats and mice; no rat-catcher ever did the work so thoroughly as they."

Place of Beauty

Beyond All Words

Almost every one who has seen the Grand canyon has attempted to describe it, in words or in paint; all have failed and will forever fail; high-falutin writing should especially be avoided.

The Grand canyon is a national park (since 1919), through and at the bottom of which flows a river, the Colorado. Geologists tell us (and a geologist, like an astronomer, will say anything) that the action of this river in cutting its way through 100 miles of stone for millions of years has created a canyon, a gorge, a valley, so immense in size and so beautiful in color as to be unlike anything else in the world. I have seen it described as "a mountain chain reversed" that is to say, if this great work of nature were to be used as a mold and a plaster cast made therein, when it was taken out and set up it would be like a chain of mountains 100 miles long, from one to ten miles wide, and, in places, one mile high; then all you would have to do would be to paint it in every color you could conceive of, and you would have the Grand canyon in reverse. —A. Edward Newton in the Atlantic Monthly.

Ruse of Jobless

As a Kansas City (Mo.) business man got into his car that had been parked, a roughly dressed man called his attention to a soft front tire and offered to change it for the spare. The offer was declined and the owner drove to a nearby filling station. An examination disclosed that the valve cap had been removed and the core partly unscrewed to let out the air. "One more way of making a job," said the filling station attendant.

Her Shortcoming

"I can't get along with my wife. All she does is ignore me."
"Ignore you?"
"Yes. And if there's anything I hate, it's ignorance."

WARNING
to PROPERTY OWNERS

TODAY a letter came to my desk that deeply impressed me. It was written by a woman—the mother in a typical American family. Her little home had been saved from foreclosure by a coat of new paint, for which a part of their meager savings had been paid.

Those few gallons of fresh paint had so revived the appearance and enhanced the value of the property that the mortgagee had consented to renew the loan . . . and the little home was saved.

I could not help thinking of the thousands of homes and buildings that are shabby and unattractive today due to several years of neglected painting; of the millions of home owners who, because of reduced incomes and enforced economy, have been obliged to sacrifice painting for taxes, interest, assessments, to say nothing of food, clothing, heat and other essentials of comfort and health.

You have seen these paint-starved houses and buildings, as have I. They are everywhere about you. Perhaps your home is included.

Do you understand what they signify? Do you realize what will happen to wood or metal that is literally naked of paint if these houses and buildings face the attack of another season of rain, snow, ice, and frost?

Never in the history of our country has the situation been paralleled. Property owners face an added burden of expense amounting to millions of dollars for repairs and replacements next spring.

And the crisis, in my opinion, will be reached this coming winter when paint of four, five, and even six years exposure to the weather will be unable to resist the elements—when badly weathered wood and metal will be easy prey for rot, rust and decay.

Today the big question facing thousands of property owners is plain. It is "paint or pay." Either you must invest a little this fall in new paint or you must take the risk of paying many times the cost of paint to repair the damage done by rot, rust and decay this winter.

Even at the sacrifice of other things, have your house or buildings completely repainted now. No investment you can make will pay better dividends. And nothing you can buy will make you and your family feel so uplifted and cheerful.

If you cannot arrange to do a complete repainting job now, at least give the badly weathered places a coat or two of protecting paint.

Look especially, to the window sills, thresholds, outdoor porches and steps; the joints of porch railings and palings; the bases of pillars; the edges of eaves; the roof; the gutters and down spouts. These are the vital spots where water lodges—where ice and frost settle—where rot and rust attack first.

A few dollars' worth of good paint, applied now, will protect these vital spots—will tide you over this crucial winter. And it will probably save you a much greater expense for repairs and replacements next spring and summer.

Under existing conditions, you may be tempted to buy a cheap paint because of its low price. I hope you will not make this costly mistake.

Even on sound lumber, inferior paint is a poor bargain. But on weathered wood, which is very porous, such paint is worse than useless. It gives you a false feeling of security and leaves you without protection.

Prices of well-known, established brands of paint are now the lowest in fifteen years. Enough good, dependable paint can be purchased for a few dollars to protect all the badly weathered surfaces on your building.

Again I repeat, do a complete job this fall if you can. But at least do the vital exposed places before it is "too late."

"Short on Information"

Do you know within 40c a hundred-weight what your hogs are worth on the market today? Many farmers do not, the Chicago Daily Drovers Journal recently stated. In some cases the resultant loss has been $40 to $80 on hogs sold. Among the reasons for this expensive shortage of information was the lack of a telephone with which to follow the trend of the market. To quote the Journal: "It is usually expensive in any business to find yourself short on information." And it costs so little to have a telephone
